MISCELLANEOUS

TO THE LADIES OF TOPEKA—House cleaning simplified by using Fositiek's Harmola, a new method of cleaning all kinds of high grade carpets and rugs without removing them from the floors. None of the confusion and annoyances of the old methods.

This is something new and practical, both thorough and giving satisfaction wherever used. Harmola is a purely vegetable preparation that removes everything foreign to the carpet. Old and badly soiled carpets made to look nearly as good as new. Harmola is what is known as Mexican soap root. It grows in all semi-tropical countries, and has been used for ages by the natives for domestic purposes in place of soap. Fremoves in a quick and thorough manner everything that is foreign to the fabric on which it is used. It is destructive to most kinds of insect life and is a sure preventive of moths. In itself, you's Magnetic Fien Powder was put on the market in San Francisco, and soon became famous in ridding houses where a was used of fleas. The Alia California, a paper published in San Francisco, raised a question of its unhealthfuiness, and Dr. Kazipaky, a Hungarian chemist of note, made a thorough investigation of it and published in the San Francisco Bulletin that Harmola, from which the Lyons' Magnetic Fien Powder was made, was one of the best disinfectants he knew of at that time and perfectly healthind. A fine article of toilet soap has been manufactured for some time at Wichita, Kansas, from Harmola, or Mexican Soap Root, and there are factories in other parts of the country manufacturing a specially prepared soap for cleanising all kinds of woolen fabrics. The lacreased demand for Harmola has nearly exhausted the root in its natural wild state, and now it is being cultivated largely in Arizona and Old Mexico. state, and now it is being cultivated largely in state, and now it is being cultivated largely in Arizona and Old Mexico.

Harmola is one of the principal ingredients in my preparation for carpet cleaning. I used it forty years while in California, for washing my clothes and for toilet purposes, and have used it for a number of years in different forms to Temove grease and other soiled spots from clothing. Harmola is the name I have given to my new method of carpet cleaning. As to its merits I would refer by permission to well known residents in different parts of Topeka that I have done work for.

Lieutenant Palmer had gone on leave of absence to visit his aged father in New Hampshire. Lyons, always on intimate visiting terms at Mrs. Palmer's apartments, went there more than ever, during Palmer's absence. Flossie was much attached to him. She was rather weakly, and was the object of her mother's tenderest solicitude. Every day, Lyons was to be seen, in the handsomest turnout he afforded himself, with Mrs. Palmer and Flossie, out for an airing. Of course, comment was to be expected, at the fort, but Lyons was quite unprepared for the malicious remarks that met his ear accidentally. He knew he was no favorite, that the officers called him foppish, because he had the means to indulge tastes and fancies that they were forced to suppress, and that he was considered a flirt among the ladies, but all this was trifling, compared with hearing his name linked with that of his friend's wife, in a dishonorable fashion. He decided to slip away without good-bye, without even sending a note. Too many notes had passed the last few weeks. He knew now that every movement was watched, that prying servants had become suspicious and the consciousness of his own sentiments, which must be carefully repressed, made him more keenly sensitive. He would write a frank, open letter from New York, and offer his

Had the Fates conspired to head over Flossie, anxiously. The next moment her eyes met his, with a bright glad look of recognition.

He crossed to her side, in a moment. "You on the train?" she said, as she crowded up the boxes and wraps on the seat opposite her, to make room for him. "I sent you a note, and expected you over. The doctor ordered Flossie away this very day, and I made no delay. She has been drooping dreadfully, with the heat. I have to take the train from New York to Equity, N. J. I don't want to alarm her father, and spoil his vacation if I can avoid it."

How sweet and true and womanly she looked, as she bent over Flossie anxiously. She had lost two darlings, Flossie looked dangerously flushed and feverish. Lyons, watching them, eursed the idle gossip of the fort, felt resentfully certain that Palmer did not half appreciate his wife, called himself an idiot, and ended by sharing the mother's anxiety over his little favorite. "Won't you take me in your arms?" Flossie asked, and at his ready compliance she laid her head against his breast contentedly. He meant to see them aboard the train for Equity, and then leave them, into the fire reflectively. but Flossie seemed worse, and clung to him so piteously, because, as she said: "Mamma's arms were not strong enough to hold her," that he felt that he must accompany them to their destination. Lieutenant Palmer opening the next

Mrs. Palmer! It came upon him like a thunderclap. He winced under the minute circumstantial details, the references to his own domestic life, the opinion that he and his wife did not "pull together" very well, the conjectures regarding his absence, since he had gone off two weeks ago, and left Lieutenant Lyons in possession of the

Her last letter, written in her usual wein, was but two days old.

He had a deep reticent nature, while his wife was social, and demonstrative. He had unbounded faith in her, and had granted her large freedom in her male companionship, with fearlessness, that seemed to challenge his social world to think ill of

Had he made a mistake? Had he seemed to sometimes neglect her? Had she so far forgotten the dignity of wifehood and motherhood, as to become infatuated with Lyons, who was so much more social and attractive than himself? He took the 11 o'clock train for home. Along the route he fancied he was regarded curiously. He was the centre of a widening ripple, which was fast embracing the whole land in its circle.

In answer to his rather haughty questioning, he got information from the servants, that Mrs. Palmer had gone away with Flossie very suddenly. Their shrugs and significant glances, humiliated him. He forbore sensitively to question, except to make sure at the depot that the pair had taken the train for New York together. He followed them there.

He haunted the hotels and the Central depot. He wondered if he should not kill Lyons. He thought of Flossie growing up to blush for her mother, and was glad for the two lying under the daisies.

By a curious chance he succeeded in tracing them to the train for Equity. He found it a slow place, behind the times, and that the party he was in search of, were at Mrs. Hickson's four miles from the station. He hired a team and driver. Under

A LORD'S LOUD SHRIEK

For the Preservation of Privilegs-Lord Randolph Churchill's Tirade,

London, April 21.-Lord Randolph Churchill, once the pet and rising hope of the Conservative party, whose speeches even after he had wrecked his chances of the highest political distinction, were always listened to with the deepest attention, was the principal in a regrettable spectacle in the house today in the course of the debate on the ducal annuity. During the speeches of Messrs, Labouchere and Storey, Lord Randolph made numerous irrelevant and incoherent interruptions which were greeted with shouts of derisive laughter from all parts of the house. His own speech was a savage and vehement attack upon the Radicals in general and upon Henry Labouchere in particular. The speech of Lord Randolph called forth a running fire of laughter from the Radical benches. He looked ill, was decidedly excited. and he appeared to forget his misrepresentation of previous speeches. On the other hand, he strewed his own with such phrases as "revolting sentiments" and "vomiting Radical trash," During ais remarkable speech Lord Randolph Churchill accused the Radicals of wanting to make the Duke of Edinburg a crossing sweeper, whereupon Charles A. Conybeare (Radical) cried out:

"His mother has plenty of money." FEDERAL COURT ENDED.

Judge Ricer Leaves for Cheyenne at 12:55 Today. The April term of the United States district court came to a close today at the end of the second week of its session. At noon Judge J. A. Riner adjourned court and after a hurried dinner at the Cope-land, left on the 12:55 train for Cheyenne where he will open court next Monday. Lieutenant Lyons sat by the open busy one, and Judge Riner has disposed
